Seven specific developmental efforts have been mounted by the Pakistan and successor Bangladesh governments. Most important among those is the Comilla coöperative. Programme itself begun in Rangunia Thana of Chittagong District is an alternative to the Comilla approach. Third, the Thana Irrigation Programme, newer than the Comilla Coöperatives, although a more widespread effort, is analyzed in some detail. The Tahan Irrigation Programme and the Comilla coöperative approach are now in process of being combined and spread to the whole country in a carefully phased plan, the Integrated Rural development Programme.

Rural development in Indonesia.
Agric. and Forestry Bull. Univ. of Alberta (Canada) 1(1978)1:29-36.
This article is derived largely from the final report of the East Indonesian Regional Development Study undertaken by the Alberta Government under the auspices of CIDA. The Alberta team reviewed physical, human and infrastructural resources in three eastern provinces, Nusa Tenggara, Nusa Tenggara Timur, and Maluku, so as to take a multisectoral approach strategy. Three key elements of the required Regional Development framework are: rural development programmes, development assistance, packages, and rural development teams.

Development for Security.
An introduction to Accelerated Rural Development (ARD) in Thailand.
WAERSA. March 1971. no. 1424.
ARD was set up in 1966. Three main objectives:
1) to promote socio-economic activity at grass roots level.
2) to make the village a viable economic unit.
3) to strengthen provincial and local administration in village development.
A long-term strategy is to combat communist infiltration.
